INTRODUCTION.

THIS volume contains the Yorkshire portion of the return of a ninth of all personal property granted to Edward I. in the twenty-fifth year of his reign, 1297. Unfortunately only a small part has survived. There is nothing at all for the North Riding, and only portions of the West and East Ridings are represented. Curiously enough, in the return of the Fifteenth levied in 1302, there is nothing at all for the West Riding, only the Wapentake between Ouse and Derwent in the East Riding, whilst the North Riding, with some few exceptions, is quite perfect.

The originals from which this volume is printed are all in the Public Record Office, the exact references being as follows :—Exchequer Lay Subsidies. Yorks. W. R., $\frac{206}{2}$, four membranes, $\frac{206}{3}$, nine membranes, $\frac{206}{4}$, one membrane, $\frac{206}{5}$, nine membranes, $\frac{206}{6}$, fifty-eight membranes, $\frac{206}{7}$, forty membranes; Ibid. Diverse Counties, $\frac{239}{219}$, one membrane; Ibid. Yorks. E. R. $\frac{202}{1}$, seventeen membranes, and $\frac{202}{2}$, one membrane. In the West Riding section each place appears on a separate membrane, containing a list of the chattels taxed, which is no doubt the return the local taxors were required to make to the chief taxors by the Act of Parliament given below. The East Riding section has no items, only the sums total, the places are entered one after another on long rolls, and the writing is uniform. This is probably the account returned into the Exchequer by the chief taxors.

Before proceeding to consider the return it will be well to notice briefly what of a similar nature for Yorkshire is already in print. The earliest and most important is the volume printed for the Surtees Society (No. XLIX.) in 1867, under the editorship of Mr. Scaife, called Kirkby's Inquest. Besides this Inquest made in 1284-5, it contains the Inquisition of Knights' Fees, 1302-3, and the Nomina Villarum for Yorkshire, 1315-6. Almost contemporaneous in date as these subsidies are there is a radical difference between the two in the method of taxation. In Kirkby and the accompanying documents it is realty that is taxed, the unit of taxation being the knight's fee, here it is exclusively personalty, so that it might often happen that the lord of a manor who had no chattels of a taxable nature within that area, would not appear among the contributors to the subsidy in that place. On the other hand, when a man's name appears among the subsidy payers in a certain place, we may infer that if not actually resident he had some kind of establishment there, whether farming or otherwise; whereas a landowner mentioned in Kirkby's Inquest, having other estates in distant parts of the country, might never have visited his Yorkshire property, and thus not have had that interest in the place which can arise only from personal acquaintance with it and its inhabitants.

The Poll Tax for 2 Richard II. (1378–9) has been printed in the YORKSHIRE ARCHÆOLOGICAL AND TOPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL. The West Riding portion appeared in volumes v, vi, and vii, and has been reprinted separately in 1882 with no index and a very inadequate introduction. Howden and Howdenshire appeared in vol. ix of the same Journal, but the remaining portion of the roll still remains unprinted. The Poll Tax, as the name imports, was strictly personal, varying from ten marcs each paid by the Dukes of Lancaster and Britany, to fourpence payable by a poor man over sixteen and not a mendicant, for himself and wife.

The only other Yorkshire Subsidy in print is one for York and the Ainsty, which appeared in vol. iv. (pp. 170–201) of the same Journal. It was levied in April, 15 Hen. VIII. (1524), on goods and lands at the rate of sixpence in the pound, being the first payment. The original is probably in the Public Record Office, but no reference is given, or any information as to whether there are returns for other parts of Yorkshire, or of the circumstances under which it was levied.¹

The granting of the Subsidy here printed marks a point of very great importance in the constitutional history of England. This grant of a Ninth of personal goods was the consideration paid by Parliament for a full confirmation by the King of all the liberties conferred by the Great Charter and the Forest Charter, and is printed in "Collectanea Topographica et Genealogica," iii, 333.

thus concluded a struggle between King and Parliament which had continued for over eighty years; indeed ever since its commencement with the first grant of the Great Charter by King John in 1215. Annexed to this confirmation by Edward I. was the celebrated statute, De tallagio non concedendo, which established the principle that no tax could be levied without the assent of Parliament. All through Edward's reign it had been the object of Parliament to obtain the concession of this principle, but until his necessities compelled the King to yield they had been unsuccessful. Lately he had been singularly unfortunate in his wars both in Flanders and Gascony, and also in Scotland, where his troops had been utterly defeated on Sept. 10, 1297, by Sir William Wallace at the battle of Stirling. At home his position was quite as unfavourable. All classes were hostile to his policy. The clergy were irritated at the unjust seizure of a fifth of their goods, the merchants at the heavy tax levied on wool called male tote, and the great nobles at his endeavour to restrict their franchises by writs of quo warranto and to make them amenable to the royal officers, whilst the common people were harassed and impoverished by many illegal exactions.

Finding it impossible by these means to raise sufficient money to carry on the wars which were then being waged, and as some of the chief Barons refused to serve beyond the seas, the King was compelled to summon a Parliament. It was ordered to meet at London on the octave of St. Michael, Oct. 6, 1297, under the presidency of his son, Sir Edward of Carnarvon,¹ as he himself had crossed over to Flanders on the 22nd of August, so as to avoid the embarrassment of meeting a hostile assembly.

The circumstances attending the meeting of this Parliament bear witness to the distrust existing in the minds of the great nobles as to the King's sincerity. The Earl Marshal and the Earl of Hereford, the chief leaders of the opposition to the King's illegal proceedings, came accompanied by fifteen hundred horse and a large force of chosen footmen. Even with this safeguard they were afraid to enter the city of London, unless the care of the gates was confided to their own followers. For some time it appeared as if matters would remain at a deadlock, but at last, by the intervention of the Archbishop of Canterbury, Robert of Winchelsea, the following agreement was arrived at. The King was to grant and confirm the Great Charter with certain articles annexed, which embodied the statute De tallagio non concedendo, and the Forest Charter. He was not thereafter to ask or exact any aid or fine (vexatio) from clergy or laity without the will and assent of the magnates, nor bear any grudge against loyalty bear, in life and limb and earthly honour, against all people; and, after his father's death, we will hold him for our king and lord. So help us God and the Saints." Printed from Ex. L. T. R. Memoranda Roll (No. 26), 24 & 25 Edw. I., m. 55, by Mr. J. A. C. Vincent, in his "Lancashire Lay Subsidies," p. 200, where will be found a very full and carefully written account of the circumstances under which this tax was granted and levied.

the Barons by whom he had been compelled to grant these terms, or their associates.

This confirmation was witnessed by the King's son at London on Oct. 10, and by the King himself at Ghent on Nov. 5 following. The confirmation is entered amongst the Statutes of the Realm under 25 Edward I., and intituled Confirmatio Cartarum. Such importance was attached to these two charters that long afterwards Lord Coke (2 Inst. 570) confidently asserted, "Magna Charta and the Charter of the Forest are called the two great charters."

As a consideration for this confirmation, the magnates of the land with the common people gave a ninth penny, the Archbishop of Canterbury and his clergy a tenth, and the Archbishop elect of York, Henry of Newark, and his clergy, who were more exposed to the danger of invasion, a fifth,¹ as a subsidy to enable the King to carry on the war in Scotland. The wools which the King had received from the religious and others, had been taken with a declaration that they would be brought into account when the Fifth was levied.²

The method of levying the Ninth is set out very fully in contemporary documents.³ In each county

¹ In the West Riding portion of the volume the returns relating to religious houses are always crossed out, because the King got more from the Fifth granted by the Northern Province, than from the Ninth granted by the laity. The clerical subsidy formed a separate return, no longer extant.

² Chronicon Walteri de Hemingburgh (ed. Hamilton), ii, 155. Hem-

ingburgh is very full and accurate in his account of the events of this year.

³ Printed by Palgrave in Parliamentary Writs, i, 63, from Rot. Pat. 26 Edw. I., part 2, m. 3. They are entered more accurately on Ex. L. T. R. Memoranda Roll. 25 & 26 Edw. I. Mich. Term., m. 38, from which source the translation above is derived.

there were to be two chief taxors, apparently appointed by the King, who were to cause to be elected two or four trustworthy men in each vill, the number being less or more according to its size; and if there were none such, fitting persons were to be chosen from the neighbouring vills. These were to swear that they would loyally tax and assess in each of the vills where they should levy the tax, all the goods in the fields or in the house (en chaump ou en mesoun) or elsewhere on the day of St. Michael last past. These goods were to be well and loyally valued, and the sums total were to be entered on a roll without any misconduct (desportier) or fraud under colour of relationship, favour, or friendship. This roll, sealed with their seals, they were to hand over to the chief taxors, who were to seal the transcript they retained.

After taking the above-mentioned oath, the two chief taxors were to go about from hundred to hundred, and from vill to vill, as much as possible, seeing and inquiring whether each man's goods had been well and loyally assessed, taxed and valued, as by right and reason they ought. Any goods removed before the day of taxation were to be valued and taxed like the rest. If they found that anything had been concealed, or from gift or favour taxed at less than its value, they were to increase and perfect the taxation according to their discretion in the most loyal manner possible for the King's use, and put it in a new roll by itself. The names of those who had done wrong (trespasse) contrary to their oath, were to be sent to the Treasurer and the Barons of the Exchequer. Other loyal men of the neighbourhood, not related to them (autres loiaux gentz de leur visne qui ne soient mie de leur affinite), were to be appointed to finish the remaining taxation. The taxation of the chief taxors and collectors was reserved for the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer. As soon as the taxation in the above form had been made, the chief taxors and collectors were to levy and collect the Ninth with all speed and pay it into the Exchequer on the days appointed.

The goods of both clerks and laymen, unless annexed to their churches, as well as the goods of the villains of the Archbishops, Bishops, Religious and all other clerks, were to be taxed. The only exceptions were the armour, harness (monteure), jewels and robes of knights and their wives, and their vessels of gold, silver and brass. The goods of lepers (meseaux), if governed by a leper superior (sovereyn meseal) were to be free; but if by a master they were to be taxed like those of other people. No one was to be taxed the value of whose goods did not amount to nine shillings or upwards.

As soon as the chief taxors received the rolls of taxation they were to make and keep a transcript, but the originals arranged in hundreds were to be sent under their seals as quickly as possible to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, because the matter was so pressing for the defence of all the land, in consequence of which it was fitting that it should be pressed on as it had never been before.¹

pluis hastee qe einz ces houres nad este."

Neither the chief taxors nor their clerks were to make any charge for delivering the bills (pur chapitres liverer), or for making tallies, or for anything else connected with this matter. The chief taxors were to pay the King in such money as was current in the kingdom, counting and not weighing it.

And for this grant and gift made to the King, our lord the King renewed and confirmed the Great Charter of Liberties and the Forest Charter for him and for his heirs.¹

The oath of the taxors succeeds to the form of taxation.² The instructions they are sworn to follow very much resemble those given above. They were well and honestly, and according to their power and knowledge, to tax the goods of the respectable men (prodes hommes) of the realm, and collect the Ninth in accordance with the form delivered to them, and in pursuance of the King's orders. They were to omit taxing no one who was liable, for love, hatred, favour, gift or promise, and were to take nothing for themselves from those whose goods ought to be taxed. They were to make the taxation loyally, and enter in a bill the sum and the name of each taxpayer, and present it to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer. They were to see that those who taxed goods under them took a similar oath, and that the clerks writing the rolls swore loyally to enter in a bill the names and sums of all, and to commit no fraud by which the King should be a loser or suffer any other damage; and that they would take nothing from any by reason of holding that office, or for making the tax, or for anything else except meat and drink.

² As this oath is short, and the original French is quaint and perhaps not very accessible to many of my readers, I give it in full:—"Le serment des taxurs del neofime:—Cest le serment as taxours e cuillurs, cest a savoir, qe bien e loiaument a leur poer e a leur essient taxerount les biens des prodes hommes du reaume, e le neovyme cuileront en la fourme qe baille leur est, & solonc ce qe leur enjoint de par le Rei, e pur rien ne lerount, ne pur amur, ne pur haour, ne pur favour, ne pur doun, ne pur promesse, qe leaument ne le

E qe leument facent la taxacioun e la soume enbreverount e le noun de chescun, e leument le presenteront au Tresorier e as Barouns del Eschequer. E qe ceux qui souz eaux les biens taxeront front faire au tiel serment. L. T. R. Mem. Roll. 25 & 26 Edw. I., m. 38).

In cities, boroughs and the royal domains the Ninth was to be levied in the same way as in the villis, saving that a robe for the man, another for his wife, a bed for the two, a ring, a buckle, a girdle of silk (seye), which they wore every day, and a hanap of silver or wood which they drunk out of (un hanap dargent ou de mazre dount il beyvent), were to be exempt. The form of taxation in the city of London and the oath of the taxors, of whom there were twelve or less in each ward according to its size, differ in no important particular from those used in the villis.

In considering the Yorkshire portion, the first question to be decided is the date of the valuation, and when the tax was to be paid. As is seen above in the instructions sent to the chief taxors, the valuation was to be made on Michaelmas day, 1297, and generally this is the date in the West Riding. No dates of any kind are given in the East Riding, probably in consequence of the returns having been entered on rolls. At Sawley near Ripon, however, it was not made until about Martinmas (Nov. 11), whilst at North Stainley it is stated, no doubt erroneously, to have been made in 24 Edward 1. In the Wapontake of Agbrigg and at Hatfield in Strafford, nothing was done until 26 Edward 1., which commenced on Nov. 20, 1297. In two places only (pp. 39, 64) the day is mentioned on which the tax was to be paid at York. It was Wednesday after the feast of St. Nicholas, which fell on Dec. 11 in the year 1297.

If the subsidy had been paid at the proper date, the King would have had no reason to complain. More than two months afterwards there were still very considerable arrears. The King was then involved in innumerable expenses, caused both by resisting more forcibly the attacks of his enemies from France, and by more sternly repressing the boldness of the Scotch rebels.¹ To try and hasten the levy of the Ninth he wrote on January 30, 1297-8, to John de Insula, and ordered him to stir up (exasperare) and persuade the taxors and collectors and even the Sheriff, to get it in without delay, as well as all other subsidies in arrear. He was to bid them consider what great danger want of money might cause, and how great would be the enemies' disheartening if they were to know that he was raised above the power of money.¹ Insula was ordered likewise to assist H., Elect of York, in collecting the fifth of the goods of the clergy of that diocese, as well as the arrears of any other subsidies which they had freely granted for the King's use.

The sum total for only one of the Ridings can be found. On the Pipe Roll, 26 Edward I., the amount contributed to this subsidy by the North Riding is stated to be 658*li* 16*s.* 2*d.*, but, as has been already mentioned, no details for this Riding have been preserved. The following is a table of the totals given in the text:—

The following extract from the already cited Memoranda Roll (m. 3) gives the reason why the totals are not forthcoming. It is there stated that on the morrow of the close of Easter, 26 Edward 1. (April 14, 1298), neither the Sheriff of Yorkshire, nor the citizens of York, nor the men of Scarborough came or sent money to Westminster, because they were stopping in their bailiwicks on account of the Scotch war, and that all the issues of these places had been assigned by the royal command for the support and forwarding of the army in Scotland. The same causes accounted for the non-appearance of the Sheriffs of Cumberland and Northumberland, of Michael de Harcla, keeper of the city of Carlisle, of the keeper of the lands of Scotchmen in Northumberland, of John de Warenne, Earl of Surrey, warden of Bamburgh Castle, and of the men of Newcastle-on-Tyne.

It is only in the West Riding that details of the goods are given on which the tax was levied. In the instructions given to the taxors printed above, it is declared that clothes and personal ornaments were to be exempt. At this period, and until quite modern times, large sums of money were invested in plate and apparel. We hear of great persons dying possessed of goods and chattels far exceeding any sum mentioned in this volume.

Baldwin Wake,¹ who died in 1282, was possessed of goods and chattels at the time of his death valued at 855*li* 0*s.* 14*d.*, of which 631*li* 0*s.* 8*d.* arose from goods at Cottingham near Hull; whilst his wife's were valued at 261*li* 10*s.* Unfortunately no details are given in either case, but the following inventory² of the goods of Osbert de Spaldington, who died very shortly after the date of this subsidy, gives a very fair idea of what the clothes and jewels of a person of knightly rank were towards the close of the thirteenth century, none of which would be subject to be rated to the Ninth :—

Ces sont les choses qe le Visconte de Euerwyke e Johan Dymmoke troverent en l'Abbeie de Rivaux des biens Sire Ousbern de Spaldington en la presence Dauntz Johan, Priour de meismes le lieu, e Dauntz Thomas de Staingreve, Dauntz Aubert, Dauntz Ric' de Beverle, Dauntz Willame de Fisheburne et Dauntz Wauter de Kirkeby, moignes de meismes le lieu, le Mescredi prochein apres la Trinite, l'an del regne le Roi Edward xxvj (June 4, 1298). ² Ex. L. T. R. Mem. Roll., 26 & 27 Edw. I., m. 86*d.* On Feb. 5, 27 Edw. I. (1298-9), Sir John de Byroun, knt., and Ralph de Dalton, clerk, were ordered to extend the manors of Skypnoun, Sproxton, Wyltoft, Spaldington, Mikelfeld and Fulford, belonging to Osbert de Spaldington (Ibid., m. 6). His personal property was very considerable, amounting in the whole to 133*li* 6*s.*, which was committed to the charge of the Abbat of Rievaulx, who undertook to pay it in two instalments. This sum no doubt included the value of the goods mentioned above (Ibid., m. 31).

² Carde now means an inferior silk, but originally it meant some linen material. See the word in the "New English Dictionary."

³ A save-cloth, like the slips now laid over the table-cloth at dinner to save it from being stained.

⁴ Striped cloth. Fr. raie, a stripe.

⁵ Lambskin with the wool dressed outwards.

⁶ Estraunlin, called farther on estrauln and estranglin. Probably connected with the word strayles, occurring in the "Finchale Book" (Surtees Soc.), pp. cxvii, clv, in inventories dated 1397 and 1411, where the term clearly means some part of the bedclothes, probably blankets. The strayles were certainly of woollen material, as in 1531 payment was made to the wife of

Thomas Milner by the Bursar of Durham for two stones of wool delivered at the command of the Lord Prior for le straylls (Ibid., p. ccccl). The estraunlin must have been some kind of woollen cloth. It seems to be derived from the Latin stragulum, a covering, or rather the Low Latin stragula, which is given in the Prompt. Parv. as the equivalent of strayle, a bedcloth.

⁹ Pers, watchet, blunket, skie-coloured (Cotgrave). The "New English Dictionary" explains blunket as a fabric of light grey or light blue colour.

¹⁰ Two leathern sacks which could be easily moved about, a draas, probably from the collocation of the word forming part of the equipment of a horse when going a journey, and so taking very much the place of portmanteaus.

TRANSLATION.

These are the things which the Sheriff of Yorkshire and John Dymmoke found in the Abbey of Rievaulx of the goods of Sir Osbert de Spaldington, in the presence of Dan John, Prior of the same place, and Dan Thomas de Staingreve, Dan Aubert, Dan Richard de Beverle, Dan William de Fisheburne, and Dan Walter de Kirkeby, monks of the same place, on Wednesday after Trinity, the year of the reign of King Edward 26. That is to say, three cloths of gold and one of say, and a linen coverlet with a border of sendal, and a cover of badger-skin with a thick cloth, and a canopy of thread, and a green thin linen cloth, and three sheets, and sixty-four ells of linen cut in three pieces, and five ells of new canvas, and five table-cloths, and a towel, and a slip for the table of thirteen ells, and a bench covering, and a wall hanging, and two little linen cloths cut, and a robe of striped stuff, a coat, and two surcoats and a cloak, and three hoods, one trimmed with meniver and the other with lamb's-wool, and two surcoats trimmed with woollen stuff, and the cloak with red deer's skin, and a coat and two surcoats and a tabard of sky coloured-stuff, and two hoods, one trimmed with meniver, the other with sendal, and a tabard trimmed with lamb's-wool, and two surcoats of woollen stuff, and a robe of white camlet lined with sendal with two hoods, and a simple tabard, and a closed surcoat with the hood of cloth of mixed colour trimmed with meniver, and a surcoat part scarlet trimmed with woollen stuff, and two old tabards, one of sky-blue-coloured stuff, the other of green, and a coat of striped stuff, and a corset, and three sets of furs for hoods, two of badger-skin, and the third of red deer, and the edging of a corset of squirrel's skin, and half-trimmed with sheepskin, and three pair of new shoes, and three old shoes, and two pair of sky-blue sleeves, and two old sleeves, and two old tunics, and a pair of hose with gilt spurs, and two portable leather sacks, and two bearskins, and two silver cups, and eighteen spoons, and seventeen saucers, and two salts, and two silver candlesticks, and a silver pitcher, and a silver cup with a foot, and seven buckles, and seventeen rings, and two flowers of gold, and seven purses of say, and three belts, and a belt belonging to a suit of harness, and a little old belt, and an anlas with an ivory handle. And all the goods above written remain in the keeping of the Abbat and Convent of Rievaulx. In witness of this thing the Prior in the Abbat's name has set his seal to this writing.

Although the taxors were strictly enjoined to tax all goods except those specifically mentioned, it is clear that this order was not consistently obeyed. Hay is only noticed in a few places, though at Michaelmas all farmers must have had some. Carts only occur at Littlethorpe, Bishopton and Bishop Monkton, all in the Ripon neighbourhood, but it is quite incredible that there were none elsewhere. At Horton-in-Ribblesdale and Thornton-in-Lonsdale persons are rated on goods the nature of which is not specified. Merchandise (marchandiza) to the amount of 6s. 8d. at Littlethorpe, and mercery (mercimonia) valued at 64s. 6d. at Wakefield, are the only two items which lead one to infer the existence of shops. At Wakefield there were very extensive tanyards, no less than nine persons being engaged in the trade with an aggregate capital of 103s. 6d.

With these exceptions, and it must be borne in mind that the West Riding was then the poorest and least civilized part of Yorkshire, there were no goods valued except cattle and corn. Except Ripon, there was no borough in any of the Liberties or Wapontakes comprised in the West Riding portion of this volume, so that it seems likely that the returns for the places now lost were not dissimilar from what has been preserved.

The following tables will give an idea of the quantity and value of the personal property taxed in the West Riding in 1297 :—

OXEN (boves). Number 1,044. Value, 255*li* 5*s*. Average price, 4*s*. 10*d*. Highest price, 8*s*.; lowest, 3*s*. 6*d*. Principal prices, 244 at 4*s*., 46 at 4*s*. 6*d*., 565 at 5*s*., 16 at 5*s*. 6*d*., 159 at 6*s*.

mixture of wheat and rye, usually grown together, and applied to the purpose of making brown bread (Atkinson's "Cleveland Glossary").

PEAS (pise). Number of quart., $18\frac{7}{8}$. Prices per quart., $16\frac{5}{8}$ at $20d.$, and $2\frac{1}{4}$ at $2s.$

FINE WHEAT (frumentum). Number of quart., $369\frac{7}{8}$. Value, $58li\ 17s.\ 6d.$ Average price per quart., $2s.\ 10d.$ Prices per quart., $63\frac{1}{8}$ at $2s.\ 6d.$, $306\frac{3}{4}$ at $3s.$

WHEAT (siligo). Number of quart., 465. Value, $56li\ 6s.\ 2d.$ Average price per quart., $2s.\ 5d.$ Prices per quart., 115 at $2s.$, $7\frac{1}{2}$ at $2s.\ 3d.$, 30 at $2s.\ 4d.$, $244\frac{1}{2}$ at $2s.\ 6d.$, 50 at $2s.\ 8d.$, $18\frac{1}{4}$ at $3s.$

The large number of oxen, compared with that of other beasts and horses, can be accounted for from the extensive way they were used as beasts of burden and for ploughing. The term bovate or oxgang, as a measure of land, shows that normally an ox was the animal employed in cultivating land. Sheep were somewhat capriciously distributed. As an extensive and fairly dry stray is necessary for their health, they could only be successfully kept where there were large upland commons or moors. Oats supplied by far the largest proportion of the different kinds of corn then grown. The absence of rye may have arisen from want of a suitable soil, sandy and dry, such as is found in the neighbourhood of York, where it is still grown.

There are four measures mentioned in these returns, the quarter, bushel, estrak' and windel. As the first is the same as the measure of the same denomination still in use, it is unnecessary to say anything about it. The second, the bushel, is used in two different senses. In Ewcross Wapontake, as at Burton-in-Lonsdale, where Thomas del Lond had half a quarter of barley worth 12*d.*, and William, son of Ralph, five bushels, worth 15*d.*, and in the Liberty of Ripon, as at Grantley, where a bushel of barley was worth 2½*d.*, the price of the quarter no doubt being 20*d.*, as it was at Sharow close by, a bushel was the eighth part of a quarter, as it is still. In the Wapontake of Strafford, however, the bushel was a measure of twice the usual amount. At Harthill (p. 44) a quarter of wheat (siligo) was worth 2*s.* 4*d.*, but a bushel, as in the cases of John Bernard and John de Walesby, was valued at 7*d.* This measure is specifically called the great bushel at Bolton-upon-Dearne (p. 48), where the bushel was the fourth part of a quarter.

The estrak' only occurs at Charlston (p. 96), where six estrak' of wheat (siligo) were worth 10½*d.*, half a quarter being worth 14*d.*, so that it was the sixteenth part of a quarter, corresponding to half a bushel. The word is the same as the modern strike, which originally meant an instrument for scraping off what is above the level of a measure in measuring grain, salt, etc., but ultimately became applied to the measure itself. The windel, or windellus, was the same fourth part of a quarter. This is proved by an entry under Crofton (p. 106), where the price of one vynd' siliginis, belonging to Henry King, was 8*d.*, and that of half a quarter of the same kind of grain in the next entry 16*d.*

As will be noticed in the table given above of the goods taxed, it is clear that the great part of these districts was purely agricultural. The only exceptions were Sheffield and Wakefield in the West Riding, and Hedon and Ravenser in the East Riding. These two last were already beginning to feel the effects of the rivalry of the rising town of Kingston-upon-Hull, which was situated on a larger river and unaffected by the encroachments of the sea.¹ It is rather strange, considering how brief was the existence of Ravenserod, that about this very time the men there were petitioning² the King to be made a free borough (fraunk' burgh), and to have granted to them certain liberties, the same as were being asked by Hull, and also for a fair, to commence on the eve of the Nativity of our Lady (Sept. 7), and last for thirty days, as being a time likely to be most profitable for the King, and a market twice a week on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Hull is not mentioned in this Subsidy, as it was in the King's hands.

¹ Hedon must have become very impoverished at this time. The wealthiest taxpayer only contributed 3s. 10d. Ravenser was much more prosperous, both as regards population and wealth. Thirteen persons paid over 10s. each. Its Ninth amounted to 16*li*, as compared with 4*li* 16*d*. from Hedon.

² The petition is undated, but as it appears on Ex. L. T. R. Mem. Roll. 26 & 27 Edw. I. (m. 26), it must have been presented about that time.

¹ By an Inq. p. m. (26 Edw. I. No. 41) taken at Dichall' before John de Lythegreynes, the Escheator, on the Sunday after the Feast of St. Peter and St. Paul, 26 Edw. I. (July 6, 1298), by the oaths of Roger Hancelyn, Richard de Bernes, John de Birley, Robert, son of Juliana, Peter de Crosseley, Thomas Frend', John de Huseley, Robert de Brixherd', Robert de Osegerthorp', Adam de Bosco, Thomas le Sergaunt, Adam Robot, "who say upon their oath, that the said William (de Bello campo, or Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick), held a tenement in the manor of Schefeld, called le Dichall', of the dower of Maud (Matild') his wife, which fell to her of the lands and tenements there belonging to her first husband Gerard de Furnivall'. This tenement after Maud's death ought to revert to Thomas de Furnivall', now lord of Hallumshire, as to the relative and heir of the said Gerard. The Jurors say that Guydo de Warewyck, son of the said William, is the next heir of the same William, and is of the age of 23 years and more."

² The name here has been rubbed out, but there can be no doubt that the place intended is Edlington near Doncaster. In 1302-3 Sir Warin Fitz Fulk was one of the Lords here (Kirkby's Inquest, 230), and in 1249-50 Maurice, son of Alan Sampson, clerk, was instituted to the parsonage here at the presentation of John le Vavasur (Archbishop Gray's Register, 108). The Maurice Sampson mentioned below must have been some relation.

³ John le Vavasur v. Fulk Fitz Warin, and Fulk his son, re land in Edlington, 1274 (De Banco. Mich. 2 and 3 Edw. I., No. 7, m. 50). In

1275 Theobald le Botyller claimed against Agnes Bacun one carucate in Edelyngton, whereof one Maude, his ancestress, was seized in the time of King John, and from her it descended to one Theobald, as son and heir, and from him to another Theobald, as son and heir, and from him to Theobald the claimant, as son and heir. Agnes vouches to warranty Fulk, son of Fulk Fitz Warin, who vouches John le Vavasur. John le Vavasur says that one Robert, his ancestor, gave the land to Maude in marriage, but that Maude subsequently gave it back. Let there be a great assize, etc. (Ibid. Mich. 3 and 4 Edw. I., m. 29.) (W. P. B.)

² In 1292-3 the Jurors of the Wapentake of Strafford found that Henry de Tineslawe and Walter le Bret held the vill of Tineslawe (Tinsley) of the heir of William de Loudre, uncle of the said Henry, of the honour of Tykeshill, as partners in an inheritance, by the serjeanty of keeping a hawk (oster'm) from Michaelmas to Easter in each year. They received each day whilst on guard 7½*d*. There were no arrears, but Walter Bret had alienated out of his share to Master John Letard twenty acres of wood three years before ; to Henry Letard, John's father, two bovates of land twenty years before ; to Roger Hering of Tyneslawe forty acres of brushwood (brussati) two years before ; to William Jordan of Tykhill thirty acres of wood and a moiety of the advowson of the free chapel of Tyneslawe, three years before ; to Idonea de Leyborne, the Lady of Kumberworth, 4s of rent, and two acres of meadow, two years before, without the royal licence (Yorkshire Assize Rolls, N. 1. 14-1, fo. 28).

¹ Goscelin Deyvill and Isabella his wife claim against Thomas atte Welle of Northanston, one third of two messuages and two bovates of land in Northanston, and against Stephen, son of Richard de Southanston, one third of a messuage and a bovat of land in Southanston, as the dower of Isabel from the estate of Robert Hascull, her late husband; 1368. (De Banco, East. 42 Edw. III., m. 273.) This Jocelin cannot very well be the one mentioned in the text, but he was doubtless a descendant, perhaps a son of the undermentioned Thomas. Fine 28,

Edw. III.; between Thomas, son of Jocelin Dayvill of Dyghton, querent, and Robert de Whalton, deforciant, of the manor of Dyghton, near North Anstan. The "Thomas atte Welle" of the first note was perhaps a descendant of "Johannes ad Fontem" of the text (W. P. B.). Goslinus Dayvill' and Isabella his wife paid 2s. to the Poll Tax in 1379. He at that time was farming the manor of Anstan (Poll Tax Roll, 33). (W. P. B.)

I may quote the following account of Ravenser, Ravenser Odd and Old Ravenser, from Mr. J. R. Boyle's Lost Towns of the Humber (p. 10). "Abbot Burton, the chronicler of the Abbey of Meaux, tells us that 'that town of Odd, which was situated near Ravenserre, was commonly called Ravenserre as well as the other.' (Ibid.) In an important passage which follows that just quoted, but which occurs again in an extended form in another part of the chronicle, the abbot gives us a very explicit account of the sites of Ravenser and Ravenserodd. It will be most convenient here to supplement the text of one passage by that of the other. 'That the distinction between the two towns may be known [it may be mentioned that] the former Ravenserre, where now [that is, near the end of the fourteenth century] nothing remains except a single manor house with its appurtenances, and which is inland, and distant both from the sea and the Humber, is called Ald Ravenserre, and this by the people of to-day, although the other town is altogether consumed.' (Ibid.) 'But that town of Ravensere Odd, at one time commonly called Odd near Ravensere, and afterwards [simply] Ravensere, occupying a position in the utmost limits of Holderness, between the waters of the sea and those of the Humber, was distant from the main land (a terra firma) a space of one mile and more. For access to which from ancient time from Ald Ravensere a sandy road extended, covered with round and yellow stones, thrown up in a little time by the height of the floods, having a breadth which an archer can scarcely shoot across, and wonderfully maintained by the tides of the sea on its east side, and the ebb and flow of the Humber on its west side. Which road yet remains visible both to pedestrian and equestrian travellers; but in its furthest part, for the space of half a mile, has been washed into the Humber since those days by the tides of the sea. Of the site therefore of the said town of Ravensere Odd scarcely a vestige remains. Which town belonging to the parish of the church of Esyngton, was distant from the town of Esyngton about four miles. Between which towns of Esyngton and Odd, the town of Klynse and the town of Sunthorp and the manor of Ald Ravensere in the parish of the church of Klynse are known to lie midway.' (Ibid. iii., p. 121-2). From Abbot Burton's statement we gather that Ravenser and Ravenser Odd were practically one place, and had at that time been entirely consumed by the sea. Old Ravenser was still existing." In the map at the beginning of Mr. Boyle's book the site of Ravenser Odd is placed on the west side of Spurn Head not far from the point, Old Ravenspur being a little north. Ravenspur, where Henry iv. landed in 1399 when he came to dethrone Richard ii., and Edward iv. in 1471, seemed to be identified by the Meaux chronicler with Ravenspur Odd, near which it must have been situated (Lost Towns of the Humber, p. 57). In this Roll Ravenser, Ravensserodde, and Old Ravenser are treated as distinct from each other.

² Of Ravensserodde Mr. J. R. Boyle in his Lost Towns of the Humber (p. 10) gives the following account:—"Its origin is described in the Hundred Rolls, in inquisitions taken in the third and fourth years of Edward i. (1274-6). The men of Grimisby say, 'that forty years ago and more [that is, about or before 1235] by the casting up of the sea, sand and stones accumulated, on which accumulation William de Fortibus, then Earl of Albemarle, began to build a certain town which is called Ravenesodd; and it is an island: the sea surrounds it.' (Rotuli Hundredorum, i., pp. 292, 402.) In the same great series of inquisitions Ravensserodde is alluded to as 'a certain encroachment [which] has been made in the county of York by William de Fortibus, at one time Earl of Albemarle at Ravensher.'" By a charter (Charter Roll, 35 Hen. iii., m. 12) dated at Westminster, Feb. 22, 1250-1, William de Fortibus, Earl of Albemarle, had a grant of freewarren in Dolynbrigge, Pyonenges, Bothelacre, Hassocacre, le Northker, le Hardacre, le Elysicrok', le Pesebergh', Layrwath, Layrsik', Layrstedend, Ald Alensik', Sevisyk', le Bargh', le Sebanc', and a certain custom called Brewyngmal. In Danthorp nearly all the names end in "dail," a share as in a deal of cards, dole of bread, or the common North Yorkshire field name Wandale. The names are as follows: Aykedayl, Langdail, Wayondail, Cotedail, Bountoftdail, Lairhildail, Mikelmargote, Dankeldayl, Wandailles and Forlandes, West Langdail, Basedore, Milnedail, Levedydail, Esthowyndail, Milnecroftdail, Waythildail, Gayrbraddail, Avenam Botes, le Parrok', Westfosse, Milnecroft, Albytoft; with the following personal names, Walter Skuta, a nativus, William Leveneth, William Ysaac, Roger del Croft, William Faber, Laurence de Humbelton, Walter the Goldsmith (Aurifaber), and Amicia his wife, and Theobald Hautayn.

up by the sea (Langdale's Topographical Dictionary of Yorkshire). Winkton, in the parish of Barmston, appears to have been depopulated in the sixteenth century (Kirkby's Inquest, p. 77*n*).

² Wyton in the parish of Swine.

³ Marton in the same parish.

⁴ Lelley in the parish of Preston. Lelley Dyke is half a mile N.E. of Lelley. Diche or Dic in Domesday times formed part of the soke of Burstwick (Facsimile Edition, ff. 52, 87*b*).

Why the parties had delayed so long before taking action is not explained. It appears that Herbert St. Quintin, the lord of the place, suspected his steward, Gilbert de Mapelton, of being on too intimate terms with his wife. To prove whether his suspicions were well founded or not, he pretended to be going away for a long journey, but returned unexpectedly about midnight, when he found his wife and Gilbert sitting on a bed in her room in the dark, kissing and playing with each other. What made the matter even more suspicious was that by their command a servant, a washerwoman, shut the door in St.

Quintin's face and would not let him in. Then, as he phrases it, "moved by anger," he broke the door down, and effected an entrance. According to Mapelton's version he proceeded to assault him, as would have been very natural; but St. Quintin states in his defence that he at once set to work to light the fire, and that whilst he was thus engaged his servant attacked the steward with his sword, and that on his endeavouring to part them he himself was wounded by his own servant. This fracas gave rise to cross actions, which do not seem to have had any result. In the first Mapelton claimed the sum of one thousand pounds against St. Quintin as damages for assault. In the second St. Quintin claimed a similar sum against Mapelton for preventing him from entering his own house, and for betrayal of confidence. The phraseology of these actions is very quaint, so I give them at length:—Gilbertus de Mapelton' queritur de Herberto de S. Quintino, quod ipse simul cum Nicholao de Sutton', Johanne le Palefayor et Waltero le Long' die dominica proxima post festum S. Mathie Apostoli, anno regni Regis nunc septimo (Feb. 26, 1278-9), vi et armis venit ad manerium predicti Herberti de Brandesburton', ubi predictus Gilbertus fuit tanquam Senescallus ejusdem Herberti, ad faciendum comodum ipsius Herberti in eodem manerio, et ipsum Gilbertum circa horam ignitegii ejusdem noctis in quadam camera ejusdem domini Herberti, ubi jaceresolebat, insultavit et vulneravit in membris, brachiis et capite, ita quod inde maemyatus est, et postea ipsum de pannis suis et calciamentis spoliavit. Et idem Herbertus eundem Gilbertum ita exspoliatum pedibus suis calcavit quod fere mortuus esset; et unam robam stragulatam, precii unius marce, caligas et sotulares suos, precii trium sol. et quatuor den., et quamdam zonam, precii quatuor den., et unum anulum, precii duorum sol., unam bursam in qua fuerunt tres sol. et unus den., una pecten eburnea (sic), precii sex den., j gladium, precii trium sol., unum tapetum, precii iijjs vjd, et cultellum precii ijs, et litteras de precepto, quas predictus Herbertus sibi miserat per plures vices, et que ei in compoto suo reddendo multum competere possent, abstulit et asportavit, unde dicit quod deterioratus est et dampnum habet ad valenciam mille librarum. Et inde producit sectam etc.

Et Herbertus venit et defendit vim et injuriam, quando etc., et bene cognoscit quod predictus Gilbertus fuit Senescallus suus et ejus valettus, et ad robas suas. Et dicit quod quia idem Herbertus multotociens a quibusdam hominibus suis fidedignis intellexit, quod predictus Gilbertus ita secretus fuit cum uxore sua, quod cum ea concubuit, propter quod ad insinuationem hominum suorum idem Herbertus elongavit se a predicto manerio suo per dimidiam leucam, fingens se longius ire, et ibi commoravit cum hominibus suis usque fere ad mediam noctem, quando accessit ad predictum manerium suum cum hominibus suis, ad videndum utrum verum esset hoc quod dictum fuit ei de predicto Gilberto necne. Et cum ibidem pervenisset, invenit predictum Gilbertum et uxorem suam in camera sua sedentes super lectum uxoris sue, ludentes et osculantes adinvicem, et paratos cubitare. Et cum idem Herbertus cameram suam intrare vellet, occurrit ei quedam lotrix, que cum eis erat in camera, et clausit hostium camere sue contra ipsum ex precepto predicti Gilberti. Et cum diu hostium illud ita clausum contra illum idem Gilbertus vi detinuit, predictus Herbertus propter hoc ira commotus hostium illud fregit, et cameram intravit, et ignem et candelam in eadem camera existentes invenit extinctos. Et dum idem Herbertus ignem illuminavit, quidam valettus ipsius Herberti, qui secum venerat, predictum Gilbertum insultavit quodam gladio, et ipsum ad terram prostravit, et superveniens idem Herbertus ad contumeliam inter eos sedandam, predictum valettum suum proprium gladio suo percussit, et casu fortuito idem valettus suus ipsum Herbertum gladio suo punxit et vulneravit. Et predictus Herbertus propter hoc non omisit, set eos ab invicem separavit, et quod nullam aliam transgressionem eidem Gilberto fecit, ponit se super patriam. Et Gilbertus similiter. Ideo fiat inde jurata, etc. Post venit predictus Gilbertus et retraxit se. Ideo predictus Herbertus inde sine die. Et Gilbertus et plegii sui de presencia in misericordia, scilicet, Petrus Swyft de Hornese et Galfridus Wiles de eadem.

Herbertus de S. Quintino queritur de Gilberto de Mapelton', quod cum idem Gilbertus esset Senescallus suus, curam habens et administrationem omnium bonorum suorum in Holdernesse, tanquam fidelis ipsius Herberti, in quo idem Herbertus multum confidebat, idem Gilbertus, ex malicia et fraude domino suo facienda precogitata, die dominica proxima post festum S. Mathie Apostoli, anno regni Regis nunc septimo, circa mediam noctem apud manerium ipsius Herberti de Brandesburton', ubi predictus Gilbertus tunc fuit tanquam Senescallus ipsius Herberti, cameram ipsius Herberti in eodem manerio in quo idem Herbertus jacere solebat, false et maliciose et contra fidem suam intravit ad concumbendum cum uxore ipsius Herberti. Et cum idem Herbertus in partibus remotis agentibus (sic) tunc ad idem manerium suum accessisset eadem nocte, et predictum factum inter predictum Gilbertum et uxorem suam percepisset, venit ad hostium camere predictae, et predictum Gilbertum et uxorem ipsius Herberti sedentes super lectum suum vidit, ludentes et osculantes adinvicem. Et post parumper candela et ignis extincti fuerunt, ob quod idem Herbertus timens uxorem suam de parte predicti Gilberti violari, et maliciam eorum volens impedire, venit ad hostium camere predictae, et intrare vellet, occurrit ei quedam lotrix, que erat in camera cum predicto Gilberto et uxore sua, et per consensum et assensum predicti Gilberti et uxoris sue hostium predictae camere clausit. Et idem Gilbertus simul cum predicta lotrice hostium predictae camere detinuit, et de predicta camera sua propria castellum contra ipsum Herbertum vi et armis fecerunt contra pacem Domini Regis, unde dicit quod deterioratus est, et dampnum habet ad valenciam mille librarum. Et inde producit sectam, etc.

Et Gilbertus venit et defendit vim et injuriam, quando, etc. Et bene defendit, quod nunquam predictis hora, die et nocte, neque anno, predictam cameram intravit, nec castellum contra eum inde, nec aliquam transgressionem ei fecit, sicut ei inponit. Et de hoc ponit se super patriam. Et Herbertus similiter. Ideo fiat inde jurata, etc. Post venit predictus Herbertus et retraxit se. Ideo predictus Gilbertus inde sine die. Et Herbertus et plegii sui de presencia in misericordia, scilicet (No names given).

⁵ On June 4, 1303, Edward I, then at Edinburgh, ordered Walter of Gloucester, the Escheator, not to meddle with the lands of which Herbert de St. Quintin had died seized, namely, the manors of Wodehalle and Brandesburton, held of the honour of Albemarle, then in the king's hands, by the service of a fifth part of one knight's fee; nor with the manors of Staunton Quintin in Wiltshire, and Frome in Dorsetshire, held of Ralph de Monte Hermeri, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, by military service (Close Roll., 31 Edward I, m. 9). The king on June 21, 1306, then at Dunstable, orders Richard Oysel, the Escheator beyond Trent, to give seisin of his lands to Herbert, relative and heir of Herbert de St. Quintin, he having proved his age and paid homage (Ibid., 34 Edward I, m. 10).

Of the latter place Mr. Scaife (Kirkby's Inquest, 57*n*) makes the following remark: "The vill of Swaythorp has disappeared, but its name is retained by a farm standing near its site, about a mile S.E. of Octon, and two miles N.E. of Langtoft."

³ Wold Newton. Taxors' names not given.

⁴ Both these places have long ceased to exist. Erghum, or Argam, stood a little to the south of the road leading from Burton Fleming to Grindale, and about a mile from the latter village. Berkildale, or Barke-dale, was one mile north of Erghum, and its site is indicated by Bartin-dale Farm, in the parish of Hun-manby. The chapel of Borkedale was given by Walter de Gaunt to the Abbey of Bardney before 1269 (Kirkby's Inquest, 54*n*).

⁴ The only memorial of this place is found in the name of a few fields on the coast in the parish of Tunstall. Poulson says in relation to this place (Holderness, ii., 84):—"There appears to have been another manor in Tunstal according to Domesday, called Monkewike, and surveyed as a berewick of St. John of Beverley. . . . The manor lies along the sea cliff, and at the time of Domesday must have been much more considerable, as containing two carucates. It has suffered materially from the devastations of the sea, and not many years hence will be entirely gone." The Domesday form is Moneuuic (Facsimile Edition, 13b).
